N. Y. San. I

In the basement or a church for colored folks a young colored girl is hiding and finding shelter while recovering from the effects of the brutality of her master and mistress. She has been under the eves of persons of her own race since Friday last, and she been treated kindly. Nothing is known of her except what she has told at interests, and there is a mystery about her that those who have sympathy with her have not yet been able to fathom. Her story, if true, is a remarkable one, covering nine years of slavery and inhuman teerment on a plantation in Hayti. Although suffering severely, she has told her story grand inhuman teerment on a plantation in Hayti.
